

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Abdulmutallib Ado ABUBAKAR is a lecturer at the Department of Mass Communication, University of Maiduguri, Nigeria. He obtained a B.A. Mass Communication from Bayero University and MSc. from the University of Lagos. He also worked as Legislative reporter at Daily Trust Newspaper and currently in Communication Studies.

Ifedolapo ADEMOSU lectures at the Department of Mass Communication, Caleb University, Nigeria. Prior to this, she had worked in Rosabel LeoBurnett, Verdant Zeal – two major marketing communications agencies in Nigeria. Her major interests are in Environmental Communication, Political communication, New Media and Popular Culture.

Sharafa DAUDA teaches at the Mass Communication Department, University of Maiduguri, Nigeria. He was a PhD candidate at the School of Communication, Universiti Sains Malaysia at the time of this publication. He is interested in research on Journalism, New(s) Media, Political Communication, Digital Media Literacy, Semiotics and Risk Communication.

Oluyinka ESAN Reader in Media and Film, University of Winchester, UK previously lectured at the Department of Mass Communication, University of Lagos. Her expertise - Media for Social Change reflects her interests in audiences, reception practices, and message design. She edited "Working With the Media" and authored "Nigerian Television, Fifty Years of Television in Africa". She has also consulted for development agencies (including UNICEF, UNFPA).

Adebayo FAYOYIN is an expert in Advocacy and Communication for Development. He holds a PhD in Communication and Language Arts from University of Ibadan, Nigeria. He has over 20 years of professional experience in various development agencies including USAID, UNICEF and UNFPA, and has held full-time and honorary faculty positions in Communication institutions in Nigeria, Kenya and South Africa.

Babatunde Abdulfatai IYANDA, is an Assistant Editor-In-Chief and Head of the Education desk with the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN). He holds a postgraduate degree in Mass Communication from University of Lagos, Nigeria. A seasoned journalist, he served at the Kano State Government owned Triumph Publishing Company Limited Kano, and has been with the News Agency of Nigeria for 24 years.

Abigail Odozi OGWEZZY-NDISIKA, PhD, is an Associate Professor of Mass Communication at the University of Lagos, Nigeria. Her emphasis is Development and Corporate Communication. She has industry experience in journalism, advertising and public relations. She consults for various government ministries, departments and agencies, along with international development agencies and management consulting firms in Nigeria.

Sharon Adetutu OMOTOSO, PhD, is currently a Research Fellow at the Institute of African Studies, University of Ibadan, Nigeria. Former acting head, Department of Politics and International Relations, Lead City University, Ibadan, her research interest include Applied Ethics, Political Communications, Media & Gender Studies and African Philosophy. She has published in books and journals, both in Nigeria and abroad.

Nosa OWENS-IBIE, PhD, (Communication Arts, University of Ibadan), is a Professor of Communication, Media and Development. He is also the Dean, College of Social and Management Sciences, Caleb University, Lagos, Nigeria and coordinates the Association of Communication Scholars & Professionals of Nigeria. He has years of experience in teaching, research, media and consultancy.